I saw a car rushing towards barricades and hitting them. Eventually it hits a kid who was walking without seeing the uncontrolled car. The driver paused for a while and didn't get down from the car. When people forced him, he came out and didn't call the police. It can be because of fear or because he didn't feel anything. Maybe he was feeling guilty of what he did or he was fearing the consequences. Or he wasn't in his senses at all and was wondering what actually was going on. We don't know what was actually going on inside head. He didn't call the police or ambulance because either he was very insensitive to the situation or his flight mechanism was calling him.
